HAPPY BIRTHDAY!

We always count it as a blessing when pastors of other good churches take time out from their busy schedules to attend one of our services. We had just such a pastor in our meetings last night. I am told that he is pastoring a small church in a little town in Pennsylvania. He drove over an hour to come to the meeting. I shook his hand and welcomed him when he arrived. The host pastor invited him to join us in the prayer meeting before the service, but it was not until after the service that he came to me and told me a story that blessed my heart! I'd like to share it with you.

He said that when he was a teenager, the church he attended brought a van load of young people to a revival meeting we were conducting at another church in his area. It was the last night of that crusade, and he remembered that I preached on the subject of hell. A dramatic illustration caught his attention and got him thinking. He had made a profession of faith when he was younger, but the Lord had been strongly convicting him that he had just been “playing a game” and had not been sincere. When the invitation came, another teen in his group went forward to be saved. He did not do so himself but remained in his pew and struggled with the conviction of the Holy Spirit. Finally, the Holy Spirit won out, and he let go and gave his heart to Christ there in his seat. On the way home from the meetings, he told the pastor and other teens of his salvation decision. His pastor followed up that decision and worked to disciple him. He is now married and is a father of four children. Several months ago, he followed the call of God and stepped out by faith to pastor a 200-year-old church that needed a pastor. When he heard that we were in the area holding meetings, he wanted to come and see us. He told me that he chose to come on that specific night because it was exactly thirty years ago to the day that he had come to our revival meeting and was saved. All I could say was “Praise the Lord!” We look forward to preaching a revival meeting series in his church in the future!
